Plumbob Murder Case.

On Tuesday, Frank Snyder and Jas. Kilfoyle were arraigned in the Third District Court for the murder of Plumbob Walker at Park City, the particulars of which were published in the HERALD some time ago. The grand jury found indictments against four persons charged with complicity—Attila Davis, Frank Snyder, Jas. Kilfoyle and Willard Snyder. Those mentioned only were arraigned, and pleaded not guilty to the charge.

A Timely Return.

Secretary A. L. Thomas returned home last evening from Washington, where he has been to attend the meetings of the Utah Commissioners. Considerable agitation has been occasioned among those interested in the Ogden election test it should be rendered void. The law provides that persons elected shall qualify within ten days; but as the Secretary was away, it was impossible for them to subscribe to the oath and qualify; and had he not returned before to-night, serious complications might have arisen.

SUNDAY SERVICES.

At the services in the Assembly
Hall on Sunday afternoon the choir
sang the hymn beginning:

Hark! the song of jubilee,
Loud as mighty thunders roar;
Or the wail of the sea,
When it breaks upon the shore.

Prayer by Elder S. L. Adams.
The choir sang the hymn on page
412:

How dark and gloomy was the night
When Satan did his powers array
Against the Prince of life and light,
And Judas did his Lord betray!

PRESIDENT JOSEPH F. SMITH addressed the congregation. He spoke of the necessity of one doing everything that was required of him by the Lord. He believed that the Lord would and persons to perform all that he desired done on earth. The Lord had set out to subdue the world and build up a kingdom, and being all-powerful, he would succeed. There had been many gospel dispensations, but there had never been such a dispensation, when the power of the priesthood was not upon the earth. Many men had been inspired to perform certain works. Columbus was inspired to discover the American continent, but it did not follow that they possessed the power of the priesthood. The spirit of the Lord moved upon the minds of men to come and dwell here in America, and build up a mighty nation in the new world; yet it did not follow that they had the gospel. The gospel was not revealed to them and the power of the priesthood had not been committed to them. They were inspired of God to strike for liberty, as Columbus had been inspired to discover this land. The purpose of God in influencing their minds was beyond their comprehension. It was necessary that they should do as they did in order that the future great purposes of the Lord might be accomplished. Mohammed had been inspired by the Almighty to do the work that he did. He was led by the spirit of the Father to accomplish the work set for him to do; yet he was not inspired as a prophet, as was Moses and others, nor did he possess the priesthood. George Washington was also inspired to do a certain work, but it did not follow that the gospel had been committed to him. In various ages of the world's history, God had raised up men to perform certain work, as the forming of kingdoms, the chastisement of the wicked, etc. All the great changes, the revolutions, the rise and fall of empires, and so on, were under the control and direction of God. All great discoveries and inventions were under the direction of God, as the application of steam, and the invention of the electric telegraph. All these things were foreseen and foretold by the prophets, and were necessary to the purposes of God. Wherever there were truth and good, whether on Christian or Heathen ground, they came from God. Joseph Smith was not raised up to discover some unknown country, to subdue nations, to break down the power of emperors, to reveal truths which pertain to civil governments particularly, but to establish the church of Jesus Christ. He was intrusted with the powers and keys of the holy priesthood, and to speak in the name of the Lord; and power was given him to bind on earth and it should be bound in heaven, and he was given power to administer in the ordinances of heaven; to build temples in which to perform certain ordinances. His work was not to be accomplished by moral or physical strength, but by the proclamation of the gospel of truth to the world that all the honest in heart might be gathered out from the world and organized for the performance of the work that had been revealed through Joseph Smith. The saints will never be called to arm themselves against the wicked, for God would fight their battles. Their mission was to proclaim the gospel; and after that testimony had been given would come the testimony of earthquakes, wars, famines; and the wicked would be overtaken and swept away in accordance with the judgments of God. The gospel message would scarcely be spread over the earth before these judgments would descend, and God would purify the world for the abode of his kingdom. The gospel is to be preached to all, and those who reject it shall be cut off, but those who receive it shall be rewarded. It was not required of the saints to go according to the wisdom of men, but they were called to be the people of God, and were to be governed by him. Things had been revealed to them that were peculiar to the dispensation of thefulness of times, pertaining solely to the winding-up scenes. Some of these principles had never before been revealed to man, but were kept for this dispensation as pertaining to the fulfillment of God's great work on the earth. One of those principles was the ordinance for the salvation of the dead, which had never been possessed in its fullness to saints in any other dispensation. Greater things have been revealed to the people of this church than were ever before revealed, and still greater were to come, because this is the final dispensation, in which God will accomplish all that he had set out to do on this earth. It was necessary for the saints to be faithful in everything that God has revealed to them, observing all his laws, if they would obtain and retain the light which he possesses, and get the glory that is in store for the righteous. Those who have entered into covenants with God, and are faithful thereto, who walk in the path of righteousness, will receive the great reward. God will accept no one into his glory who has any other God than the God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, who made the heaven and the earth. Men have a great deal to learn and do before they will become like the Father. In this life it is impossible to become perfect in all things, because nature is weak. Still some had been deemed worthy of escaping death, and enjoying something of the presence of God, but they had not been permitted to enter the celestial glory. Until mortality is able to put on immortality, man will never be able to become perfect. What we fail to learn here we must learn hereafter, for no man is going into the presence of God until he is pure and holy. In proportion as he is free from sin will he be able to approach nearer to the Father. To help men to become pure is the work of the saints through the power and influence of the gospel. It was to that end that the gospel had been revealed through Joseph Smith. God had given the saints the keys with which they can unlock the great treasures of knowledge, so necessary to their eternal salvation. If they do not obtain that knowledge they must suffer the consequences.

The choir sang an anthem and Elder K. G. Macfarlane pronounced the benediction.

FUNERAL SERVICES.

Over the Respected Citizens—
John Van Cott and William Bringham.

At the appointed hour on Tuesday morning, the hearse containing the remains of the lamented John Van Cott left the late residence, and proceeded to the Assembly Hall. Arriving there the casket was deposited so that the many friends of the deceased were allowed to take a farewell look at his features, of which opportunity a large number availed themselves. The services began a few minutes past 11 o'clock, the choir singing and President Wilford Woodruff praying. President Jos. F. Smith delivered a most interesting discourse, full of sympathy and prophetic hope for the future. He was followed by President Woodruff, who adverted on the many excellent qualities of the deceased, besides speaking in the highest terms of the worth of the deceased, he pointed to the life of the dead as worthy of the emulation of all. The choir sang and the remains followed by a large procession were taken to their final home.

At 10 a.m. on Thursday, the remains of the late Bishop Bringham of Springville, were taken to the Springhurst Tabernacle, and in front of the stand. The building was tastefully draped, as also was the chair which the deceased had long occupied. It was raised above the casket, and had a white band stretched across the draped arms and seat, as if forbidding occupancy. Counselor Kelsey presided. President A. O. Smoot and counselors of Utah state, were present on the stand, and the huge building was crowded with sympathetic friends and neighbors. The Springville choir, under the direction of Elder George Hanson, sang an appropriate hymn. President A. O. Smoot spoke first, and was followed by Counselors D. Johns and H. H. Cluff, all the speakers dwelling on his integrity, uprightness, and usefulness. Counselor Kelsey attempted to speak, but was so greatly moved that, after a few words expressive of the great worth of his dead friend, he was forced to desist. A few remarks were also made by Bishop Harrington of American Fork. Benediction was pronounced by Elder P. H. Boyer, and the remains were again placed in the carriage by the pall bearers, and sadly conveyed—accompanied by loved mourners to the grave.

Street Lighting.

The city has at last determined to try the utility of the electric light as a street illuminator. Three lights will be tried along North Temple street, which will be put up about the centre of the street, and it is claimed they will light nearly four blocks each way. In view of the reduction in the price of the street lamps the city has authorized her extension over some eighteen new blocks thus practically giving light on about thirty blocks where there is at present no light illumination. The praise-worthy feature connected with this, is the fact that these additions will, owing to the reduction in the cost per lamp, create very little additional expense. The price per street lamp has been reduced $10 per year.

The Masquerade.

This evening the long expected masquerade to be given by the Hebrew societies for the benefit of the Jewish school fund takes place at the Opera House. The town has been alive in anticipation of the event for the week past, and all are now in readiness for it. A leading mining superintendent thinks he will win the first prize by assuming the character of Plauton as a missionary among the Fiji Islanders; a porter from the Valley House says he will be governor of Utah for one night at least. Another party will represent the Sazarak Lying Club, the character being rendered perfect by reason of the party wearing a copy of the daily Tribune; the two Ogden papers are to be represented by old and toothless ladies; the Provo Enquirer is to find a representative in Paul Pry; the Southern Utah Times will appear as a postoffice; and the other Utah papers as patent inside medicines. Thetis or Minerva, the goddess of wisdom and intelligence, will appear for the HERALD. There will be a mortal combat between Pale Savon and Pale Sapon soaps, and as Snell has wisely hired a 4-year-old boy to play Pale Savon, and a brother of Slade, the Maori, to take the part of Pale Sapon, it is a reasonable expectation that Savon will be Saponed before the entertainment is over. There will be a trotting heat between Cheap John and Isadore Morris, Sam Levy handling the reins for the first, and Simon Woolf cracking the whip over the latter; and a soft glove contest, sparring exhibition by Geo. A. Black and S. C. Ewing. The feature of the evening, however, will be the match between some of Mr. Henry Dinwoodey's glew and a Singer sewing machine agent as to which will stick the harder. It is feared the agent will be successful, as in a similar contest with Chinese cement, he came off victorious. Mr. J. B. Glass will drive a couple of Studebaker wagons tandem around the first circle, while Jake Moritz will contribute his share to the general enjoyment by standing on his head four consecutive times in four consecutive hours. The above are but a few of the attractions which may be mentioned; the object is charitable, tickets are $5, and the rules are published elsewhere.

This afternoon the members of the Tabernacle choir and other friends go to Ogden, where the choir will give a concert to-night. They leave on the 3.40 train for Ogden, and the company will number close on 200 strong. The good people of Ogden delight at the prospect, and will give the body a welcome such as it merits, and will also show how fully they appreciate the reputation of this musical organization, by giving it a bumper house. They will return on Washington's birthday, on either of the trains they may elect to come home on.

A Fine Invention.

Mr. S. L. Adams, jr., of the enterprising blacksmithing firm of S. L. Adams & son, Commercial street, has invented a very practical method of adjusting corks upon horse shoes. It consists in dovetailed sockets in the toe and heel of the shoe into which the corks for both are inserted in a horizontal direction and keyed up tightly to the shoulder of the sockets. The corks are so arranged as to admit of being reversed in case they are worn unevenly. New or sharpened corks can be easily adjusted without the aid of a blacksmith, rendering the invention so greatly superior to the old method of re-corking or sharp-shoeing horses that it can not be doubted Mr. Adams will find ready sale for the new style of shoe.

Knights of Pythias.

The Knights of Pythias from Salt Lake and Park City, met at Ogden on Monday, where the institution of the crescent division took place. In the evening a concert and ball were given at the Broom hotel. The citizens of Ogden treated the visitors with every consideration, and on Tuesday morning the Knights all came to Salt Lake, being met at the depot by a brass band. Headed by the band, the Knights marched over various parts of the city, and then went to the Continental Hotel. Last night, they indulged in a delightful dance. Some of the Knights may remain until Friday.

Spirits Playing at Ninepins.

NORWICH, CONN., Feb. 2.—Half way between the quaint old village of Norwich town and the historical settlement of Bean Hill, on the west side of the Yantic River, is a haunted house. It is on the Otobando road, in the center of a cluster of houses—a small frame building, owned by Samuel McIntyre. It is now unoccupied. About five years ago the wife of Mr. McIntyre committed suicide in the dwelling, and Mr. Roddy Burns, calkman and his wife, who live directly across the street, say that her spirit returns each night to the old home and rushes through the vacant rooms with the roar of a whirlwind. While talking to a friend at his own home the other day Roddy said:

"I can't sleep much o' nights for the noises over there. It's a wailing all night. It's the lady that killed herself, ye know. First I hear a grating o' feet, and I know the lady has cum. Then there is a rattle, and all the house seems full of spirits playin' at ninepins, ye know. I can hear the balls rollin' down the empty rooms—roll, roll, boom, kersplink. Then the pins go over. Then it's as quiet as death, ye know, for a moment or so; but suddenly something like a great sand-bag goes whistlin' thro' the air and comes down on the floor with a boom, bang! It's a little sleep that I get. Ain't that so, dearie?"

Mrs. Burns, who is sick abed, replied from under the trembling bed-clothes, "That is a lot troo, dearie quite troo, dearie!"

The Burns family are Scotch, and are imbued with all the superstitious beliefs of the Scottish peasantry. None of the other families in the neighborhood have complained of ghostly disturbances. Mrs. Burns' illness is said to be due entirely to nervous prostration, occasioned by her terror of the ghostly revelers.
